ABOUT PABS

The Pan African Burn Society (PABS), established on May 18, 2004, in Cape Town, South Africa, by Dr. Elbie Van der Merwe and the Tygerberg Burns Unit, is a professional organization committed to advancing burn care, prevention, and reconstruction across Africa. As a federation uniting national societies, healthcare professionals, researchers, and advocates, PABS operates through a dedicated volunteer team. Its mission is to foster a collaborative community for knowledge exchange, provide hands-on training for burn care teams, promote global burn prevention through partnerships, and develop evidence-based guidelines to optimize care. PABS envisions itself as Africa's leading hub for burn-related expertise, driving improved outcomes for burn survivors by enhancing skills, advocacy, and hope across the continent.

PABS pursues its goals through key initiatives tailored to Africa's unique challenges, such as limited resources and high burn incidence. It emphasizes education, research, and training by organizing workshops and conferences that facilitate professional collaboration and innovation. PABS also champions public policy and advocacy, working with global organizations to secure better resources and promote burn prevention strategies. By establishing standardized, evidence-based protocols, it enhances the quality of burn treatment and reconstruction. Through its biannual congresses, held since 2003, and a robust network of national burn societies, PABS fosters unity and drives transformative advancements in burn care across Africa.

UPCOMING (PABS) CONFERENCE

This landmark congress will unite experts to share innovations, research, and strategies for improving burn outcomes. It emphasizes collaboration to address Africa's burn care challenges.

As the 11th in the series, it builds on two decades of progress, fostering transformative discussions and hands-on sessions.

About Nairobi, Kenya

Nairobi, Kenya's dynamic capital, is a bustling metropolis and a leading hub for international conferences, technology, and medical research in East Africa. Nestled amidst lush greenery, it uniquely blends urban sophistication with natural beauty, hosting wildlife parks like Nairobi National Park within its city limits. The city thrives as a melting pot of cultures, showcasing a vibrant mix of Kenyan, African, and global influences in its cuisine, art, and architecture. Known for its innovative tech scene, often dubbed the "Silicon Savannah," Nairobi drives economic growth and entrepreneurship. With its mild climate, iconic landmarks like the Kenyatta International Convention Centre, and proximity to stunning natural landscapes, Nairobi is a captivating destination for business, culture, and adventure.

Why Nairobi?

Vibrant Economic & Tech Hub

Urban & Natural Beauty

Cultural Melting Pot

Global Conference Destination

Nairobi is the capital of Kenya and one of Africa's most dynamic cities. It blends modern urban life with rich cultural heritage and even offers a unique chance to experience wildlife within city limits.

What to Wear

For Conference Sessions:

- Business professional or business casual attire
- Light, breathable fabrics during the day
- A blazer or light sweater for cooler mornings or air-conditioned venues

For the Conference Dinner:

- Dress code: Smart / Semi-formal
- Recommended: Evening dress, cocktail dress, suit, or traditional formal wear
- Bring a light jacket or wrap-it may be chilly in the evening

Other Essentials:

- Umbrella or light waterproof jacket (due to potential light rains)
- Comfortable walking shoes (especially for sightseeing)
- Sunglasses, sunscreen, and a hat for daytime activities

Nairobi Climate – Late October

October in Nairobi marks the start of the short rainy season, with warm days and cooler mornings and evenings. Expect a mix of sunshine and occasional light showers, often in the late afternoon or evening.

- Temperatures: Low: 13°C (55°F), High: 26°C (79°F)
- Rainfall: Light and scattered, offering pleasant conditions for outdoor activities.

Local Etiquette and Customs

Greetings: Handshakes are the most common form of greeting in Nairobi, often accompanied by a friendly "Habari?" (How are you?).

Language: Both English and Swahili are widely spoken, making communication easy. Using a few Swahili phrases is always appreciated.

Cultural Sensitivity: Nairobi is cosmopolitan and diverse, with people from many cultural and religious backgrounds. Dress is generally modern, but modest attire is recommended when visiting places of worship.
